Secret British Measures Placed In Effect To Combat Menace

BERLIN, Nov. 24—Nazi circles asserted today that the Reich will impose an air-tight blockade on England within two months.

Insisting that the Reich would make quick work of blockading England informed quarters declined, however, to specify the exact methods they intend to employ.

It was assumed, however, that the Germans will strive to build up a combined sea and air ring around the British Isles—with a number of surprises in the methods of modern warfare still to be sprung.

Retaliation Expected

At the same time, informed circles also predicted vigorous German retaliatory measures against British seizure of German exports.
One source told International News Service:

"Our announcement that we will return every shot with ten not only applies to military combat, but in the same sense to the economic field."

LONDON, Nov. 24 — With the toll in ships sunk in nearby waters since Saturday now at 26, Britain faced a new sea menace today following revelation that the Germans are sowing mines the size of footballs by dropping them from bombing planes.

This new technique was revealed when Britons were told that miniature mines have been dropped by parachutes into the Thames Estuary, only a short distance from London.

Bombers Sighted

Several specially equipped bombers were sighted flying low over the waters, moving slowly as they dropped the deadly little mines into one of the world's busiest and most famous shipping lanes. Eye-witnesses said they clearly saw the mines float down to the surface.

TWO RECEIVE PRISON TERMS

Pearl Bush And John Hyde Plead Guilty Before
Judge Terwilliger

Two penitentiary sentences were imposed by Judge Meeker Terwilliger Friday in the arraignment of persons indicted this week by the Pickaway County Grand Jury.

John F. Hyde of Chicago who was indicted on a charge of safe-breaking pleaded guilty and was sentenced to one to 20 years.
Hyde was arrested shortly after he broke into the safe at the Pick-away County Farm Bureau office on October 29 and obtained $86.50.
He was seen in the offices and was arrested shortly after leaving.

The other sentence was imposed on Pearl Bush, Circleville, indicated for failure to support four children. Bush was sentenced to one to three years after a plea of guilty.

Jachim Denies Charge

Felix Frank Jachim, Youngstown, indicted on a charge of attempting to commit burglary, denied the charge. He did not furnish bond of $5,000. He is accused of entering the Eshelman mill offices September 9.

Howard McCafferty, East Mill Street, denied a charge of stabbing with intent to wound Mrs.
Lenora Dawson, also of East Mill Street, on November 6. His bond was set at $500.

Others who denied the charges against them and the amounts set for their bonds were: Pearl Mc-Whorter, Orient Route 1, petit larceny, $200; William Hill, Hayward Avenue, two charges of auto theft, $500 bond on each, and Russell Smith and Warren Pence, burglary, no bonds set. Smith and Pence are now in the county jail serving time for stealing articles from automobiles. The indictment involves the theft of $3 worth of gasoline from the B. F.
Conrad saw mill at Ashville.

Tony Grzelewski, Canton, and William Fox, Zanesville, indicted on a charge of taking tools valued at $200 from the Andrews Asphalt Paving Company, October 13, will be arraigned later. They are under bond.

No trial dates have been set by Judge Terwilliger.

FEDERATION OF EUROPE SEEN AS PEACE MOVE

Leading British Liberal Outlines Program In Letters To U. S.

WOULD POOL POSSESSIONS

Lord David Davies Says
Hitler May Agree To Proposition

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24 — An active campaign by a leading English liberal for creation of a federated Europe, with Great Britain and France leading the way, was revealed today in letters received from London by Rep. Harold Knutson (R) Minnesota.

The proposal appeared to have the three-fold objective of ending the war, creating a lasting peace and preserving democracy in Europe.

Lord David Davies, a liberal member of the English house of Lords, informed Knutson in a letter that he had already sounded out a European democratic nation on the proposal for a federated Europe. He suggested that Great Britain and France lead the way.

Plan For Peace

In an earlier communication,
Lord Davies declared that peace terms ending the present war should be written with a view to preserving peace.

He suggested that the colonial powers, which are chiefly the United States, Great Britain, France and Holland, should pool their possessions. These possessions, under the plan, would be administered so as to give all nations an equal opportunity to access to raw materials. A battle for raw materials is believed by many to be at the base of the present war.

"I also was told on excellent authority in Europe in August that a confederation of European nations also is the objective of chancellor Hitler of Germany," said Knutson, who was a congressional delegate to the interparliamentary union conference in Oslo.

Hitler Plans Aired

"I was told that he wants to bring all Europe into a confederation and that he would consider his life's work ended if this is accomplished.

ARMY DICTATOR GETS SET-BACK IN CUBAN VOTE

HAVANA, Nov. 24 — Although official confirmation was unobtainable, usually well informed sources claimed today that Col.
Fulgencio Batista, Cuba's military dictator, may announce his presidential candidacy within a week.

With returns from more than 200 precincts in the recent constituent assembly elections yet to be counted, it is now generally conceded that the government party suffered a set-back in the voting.

According to political experts, anti-Batista parties will control at least 41 of the 76 seats in the assembly.

DASH FOR FREEDOM ENDS IN DEATH FOR CONVICT

CINCINNATI, Nov. 24—A Negro fugitive was dead today, shot when he tried to escape from an officer who was taking him from the federal reformatory at Milan, Mich., to Chattanooga, Tenn., to face burglary indictments.

The man, Alonzo Hayes, 30, of Detroit, was being taken from the Cincinnati railroad station to the county jail when he attempted to flee. Cincinnati Detective Millard Schath headed him off and, when he refused to halt at his command, fired two shots.

GERMANY MAY LOSE RED AID

High Neutral Observer Says
Rumanian Situation
Holds Real Threat

LONDON, Nov. 24—Chancellor Hitler is in danger of losing his "last remaining friend"—Soviet Russia—if he attempts to take advantage of Rumania's internal situation and throws the German army in that direction, a high neutral military observer in London predicted today.

"Russia," said his source, "will not permit Germany to seize Rumania. I firmly believe Germany in Rumania would constitute a serious threat to Russia's southern flank and threaten the dominance of the Soviets in the Black Sea.

"This is most vital to Soviet security in times like these in Europe.
Nobody is permitting exposure of their flanks, much less Russia."

Pact Of Convenience

The observer contended that since the conquest of Poland and Russia's part in it, events have made it increasingly clear that the German-Soviet alliances is a "marriage of convenience built upon quicksands."

He pointed out that the Soviets immediately began building strong defensive works against a possible German attempt to move toward the east later on.

He declared a Russian "Magnet line" is being constructed in Russian Poland "in depth" as an advanced unit of a 100-mile deep line stretching from the Black Sea to the Baltic.

Russia's simultaneous moves in the Baltic area to secure sea bases in Lithuania, Latvia, Estonia and Finland were described as a defensive or security precaution in that area against Gergany's Baltic sea power.

said that Hungary had twice re-

FARMER BEATEN FOR BAN ORDER TO TWO HUNTERS

ST. CLAIRSVILLE, O., Nov.
24—Seriously beaten by two youths he had ordered from his farm, Frank Gardner, farmer of nearby Fairview, was in critical condition today in the Cambridge hospital, while his son, Paul, was recovering from lesser injuries.

Two hunters, Sandy Mamula, 23, and Joseph Marline, 21, surrendered to the sheriff shortly afterwards and reportedly admitted the assault. They said they became involved in a fight with the Gardners.

The elder Gardner suffered a fractured skull and may lose the sight of one eye.

STRATEGIC CITY OF NANKING IS TAKEN BY JAPS

TOKYO, Nov. 24—Japanese troops today occupied the strategic city of Nanking, former capital of Kwangsi province, and until now the chief depot for arms shipments into China from Indo-China.

Japanese troops crossed the Yu-kiang river late yesterday and swept into the city, in flames after a merciless aerial bombardment.

The invading forces dealt a "crushing blow" to the Chinese 188th division which attempted to hold the city, an official announcement said.

President Says Ambassador
Not Being Called Home
From Europe

WARM SPRINGS, Ga., Nov. 24
—President Roosevelt, vacationing here, crossed up politico-military experts today by suggesting strongly that next spring still would find the United States a neutral nation in Europe's war.

Word came down from his cottage on Pine Mountain that reports from European capitals, New York and Washington caught him by surprise when suggestion was made that several key ambassadors in the war zone might be called home for consultation and report.

Official information at Warm Springs ignored—perhaps denied —any inference President Roosevelt might be considering a roundtable gathering of American diplomats before Christmas designed to work out some new European peace formula.

Recall Denied

Regardless of news dispatches indicating that Joseph P. Kennedy, American ambassador to London, and Joseph E. Davies, American envoy to Brussels, were on their way back to Washington for diplomatic conference of an unannounced nature, the president denied flatly that he had called anyone home.

On the subject of war and peace
Mr. Roosevelt made a rather significant statement last night in the course of addressing Warm Springs infantile paralysis patients after carving Thanksgiving turkey.

"When I left here at the end of April or the beginning of May—I that I would be back this fall if we did not have a war.

U-BOAT IGNORES CAPTAIN'S PLEA FOR DUTCH SHIP

LONDON, Nov. 24 — With one survivor claiming that the vessel had been deliberately sunk by a German U-boat despite her neutral registry and mission, five sailors of the Dutch cargo steamer Slidrecht were safe on British soil today.

The five men were landed by a trawler at an unnamed northwestern English port last night after drifting for 7½ hours in an open boat.

The survivor said that the captain of the Slidrecht pleaded with the U-boat captain for consideration on the grounds the vessel was Dutch and bound for a Netherlands port, but that the submarine commander sank her anyway and declined to take the crew aboard his own craft.

PASADENA, Cal., Nov. 24 —
Forty years ago F. Gilbert Slater cause of her parents' objection to the marriage.

Today they announced they will wed again in Yuma, Ariz., within a few days.

The former Mrs. Slater, now
Mrs. John Larr, and Slater met yesterday at the home of their granddaughter at a family re-

British Mine Sweepers Get Busy

WITH an alarming increase in the sinking of British and neutral vessels by floating mines, British mine sweepers are the busiest of war craft these days as they attempt to clear the shipping lanes in the North Sea of the deadly spheres. Photo above shows a mine

SENATOR SEEKS PAY AS YUGO ARMS PLAN

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24—Declaring a sound economy is the best national defense, Senator Vandenberg (R) Michigan, today proposed a pay-as-you-go armament program, and a "realistic" investigation of past defense outlays.

One of the leading candidates for the Republican presidential nomination, Vandenberg emphasized that he favors an adequate national defense, but at the same time successes the necessity of a program planned in relation to the national income.

"A sound public credit is the greatest of all national defense factors," he said, "therefore unless extraordinary national defense expenditures are on a pay-as-you-go basis you have torn down more national defense than you have built up.

Hates Tax Boosts

"Like any other hard-pressed citizen I hate to contemplate any new taxes to be tossed to the ravenous appetite of this administration, but I firmly believe that extraordinary expenditures for the national defense should be paralleled by special ear-marked revenues to pay for them."

Vandenberg said he was in "emphatic agreement that we must make our democracy invul-nerable to attack," and added that "in the last 12 years I have voted for at least $6,000,000,000 for this purpose, and I will vote for more if required."

COUPE CARRIES NINE; ONE DEAD EIGHT INJURED

COLUMBUS, Nov. 24—One man was killed and 10 other persons were being treated today for injuries received, the state highway patrol said, when a coupe carrying nine passengers crashed head-on into another car while attempting to pass a truck.

Driver of the coupe, George Davis, 36, Columbus, died of a skull fracture several hours after the accident, which occurred last night four miles south of Columbus on U. S. Route 23.

All of the injured received hospital treatment, but none was believed in critical condition. Witnesses told patrolman that Davis, returning from Circleville, swerved to pass a truck, and crashed into

Hitler Leads War

All humanitarian considerations aside, the palm of success thus far goes to Nazi Germany and her under-water mines. Presumably parachuted from airplanes, controlled by some ingenious new magnetic device and loaded with an explosive of incalculably destructive ability, they have been immensely successful in Germany's campaign to break the British blockade.

On the diplomatic front, Great Britain seems to have scored one victory and suffered one setback.

The victory was achieved in Rumania, where King Carol appointed pro-ally George Tatarescu as his new premier in a stern rebuff to Adolf Hitler's attempts to gain an economic stranglehold on his Balkan kingdom.

Setback For Allies

The setback came in the low countries when Holland and Belgium protested to Britain against her contemplated seizure of German exports for the Nazis' allegedly "indiscriminate" mine-laying.
Gravity of this British dispute with her two friendly neighbors across the North Sea cannot yet be estimated. There may be serious repercussions far beyond the original anticipations of Britain's statesmen.

ARMY DICTATOR GETS SET-BACK IN CUBAN VOTE

HAVANA, Nov. 24 — Although official confirmation was unobtainable, usually well informed sources claimed today that Col. Fulgencio Batista, Cuba's military dictator, may announce his presidential candidacy within a week.

With returns from more than 200 precincts in the recent constituent assembly elections yet to be counted, it is now generally conceded that the government party suffered a jolt-back in the voting.

According to political experts, anti-Batista parties will control at least 41 of the 76 seats in the assembly.

DASH FOR FREEDOM ENDS IN DEATH FOR CONVICT

CINCINNATI, Nov. 24—A Negro fugitive was dead today, shot when he tried to escape from an officer who was taking him from the federal reformatory at Milan, Mich., to Chattanooga, Tenn., to face burglary indictments.

The man, Alonzo Hayes, 30, of Detroit, was being taken from the Cincinnati railroad station to the county jail when he attempted to flee. Cincinnati Detective Millard Schacht headed him off and, when he refused to halt at his command, fired two shots.

GERMANY MAY LOSE RED AID

High Neutral Observer Says Rumanian Situation Holds Real Threat

LONDON, Nov. 24—Chancellor Hitler is in danger of losing his "last remaining friend"—Soviet Russia—if he attempts to take advantage of Rumania's internal situation and throws the German army in that direction, a high neutral military observer in London predicted today.

"Russia," said his source "will not permit Germany to seize Rumania. I firmly believe Germany in Rumania would constitute a serious threat to Russia's southern flank and threaten the dominance of the Soviets in the Black Sea."

"This is most vital to Soviet security in times like these in Europe. Nobody is permitting exposure of their flanks, much less Russia."

Pact Of Convenience

The observer contended that since the conquest of Poland and Russia's part in it, events have made it increasingly clear that the German-Soviet alliances is a "marriage of convenience built upon quicksands."

He pointed out that the Soviets immediately began building strong defensive works against a possible German attempt to move toward the east later on.

He declared a Russian "Magnet line" is being constructed in Russian Poland "in depth" as an advanced unit of a 100-mile deep line stretching from the Black Sea to the Baltic.

Russia's simultaneous moves in the Baltic area to secure sea bases in Lithuania, Latvia, Estonia and Finland were described as a defensive or security precaution in that area against Gergany's Baltic sea power.

At the same time this source said that Hungary had twice re-

FARMER BEATEN FOR BAN ORDER TO TWO HUNTERS

ST. CLAIRSVILLE, O., Nov. 24—Seriously beaten by two youths he had ordered from his farm, Frank Gardner, farmer of nearby Fairview, was in critical condition today in the Cambridge hospital, while his son, Paul, was recovering from lesser injuries.

Two hunters, Sandy Mamula, 23, and Joseph Marline, 21, surrendered to the sheriff shortly afterwards and reportedly admitted the assault. They said they became involved in a fight with the Gardners.

The elder Gardner suffered a fractured skull and may lose the sight of one eye.

STRATEGIC CITY OF NANKING IS TAKEN BY JAPS

TOKYO, Nov. 24—Japanese troops today occupied the strategic city of Nanking, former capital of Kwangsi province, and until now the chief depot for arms shipments into China from Indo-China.

Japanese troops crossed the Yukiang river late yesterday and swept into the city, in flames after a merciless aerial bombardment.

The invading forces dealt a "crushing blow" to the Chinese 188th division which attempted to hold the city, an official announcement said.

Gloomy skies are expected to bring light rain late Friday and colder temperatures Saturday.

STRIFE PARLEY DENIED

President Says Ambassador Not Being Called Home From Europe

WARM SPRINGS, Ga., Nov. 24 —President Roosevelt, vacationing here, crossed up politico-military experts today by suggesting strongly that next spring still would find the United States a neutral nation in Europe's war.

Word came down from his cottage on Pine Mountain that reports from European capitals, New York and Washington caught him by surprise when suggestion was made that several key ambassadors in the war zone might be called home for consultation and report.

Official information at Warm Springs ignored—perhaps denied—any inference President Roosevelt might be considering a round-table gathering of American diplomats before Christmas designed to work out some new European peace formula.

Recall Denied

Regardless of news dispatches indicating that Joseph P. Kennedy, American ambassador to London, and Joseph E. Davies, American envoy to Brussels, were on their way back to Washington for diplomatic conference of an unannounced nature, the president denied flatly that he had called anyone home.

On the subject of war and peace Mr. Roosevelt made a rather significant statement last night in the course of addressing Warm Springs infantile paralysis patients after carving Thanksgiving turkey. He said:

"When I left here at the end of April or the beginning of May—I have forgotten when it was—I said to the people down at the train that I would be back this fall if I did not have a war."

U-BOAT IGNORES CAPTAIN'S PLEA FOR DUTCH SHIP

LONDON, Nov. 24 — With one survivor claiming that the vessel had been deliberately sunk by a German U-boat despite her neutral registry and mission, five sailors of the Dutch cargo steamer Sliedrecht were safe on British soil today.

The five men were landed by a trawler at an unnamed northwestern English port last night after drifting for 7½ hours in an open boat.

The survivor said that the captain of the Sliedrecht pleaded with the U-boat captain for consideration on the grounds the vessel was Dutch and bound for a Netherlands port, but that the submarine commander sank her anyway and declined to take the crew aboard his own craft.

COUPLE DIVORCED 40 YEARS WILL REMARRY

PASADENA, Cal., Nov. 24 — Forty years ago F. Gilbert Slater and his wife were divorced because of her parents' objection to the marriage.

Today they announced they will wed again in Yuma, Ariz., within a few days.

The former Mrs. Slater, now Mrs. John Larr, and Slater met yesterday at the home of their granddaughter at a family reunion.

British Mine Sweepers Get Busy

WITH an alarming increase in the sinking of British and neutral vessels by floating mines, British mine sweepers are the busiest of war craft these days as they attempt to clear the shipping lanes in the North Sea of the deadly spheres. Photo above shows a mine sweeper on duty with war ships in the distance. Inset shows a "captured" mine (arrow).

SENATOR SEEKS PAY AS YOU GO ARMS PLAN

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24—Declaring a sound economy is the best national defense, Senator Vandenberg (R) Michigan, today proposed a pay-as-you-go armament program, and a "realistic" investigation of past defense outlays.

One of the leading candidates for the Republican presidential nomination, Vandenberg emphasized that he favors an adequate national defense, but at the same time stressed the necessity of a program planned in relation to the national income.

LABOR WARNED DIVIDED RANKS FACING DEFEAT

FORT WORTH, Texas, Nov. 24 —America's divided labor forces today had the warning of Elliott Roosevelt, son of the President, that unless they restore peace in their own ranks "labor is due for a frightful beating."

Asserting in a Texas-wide radio broadcast last night that the nation "is out of patience with the surly, picaresque attitude of the American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organizations that has split labor in two," Roosevelt continued:

"There is a new threat in the air against labor and unless some semblance of peace is restored labor is due for a frightful beating. This beating may come through congressional legislation. What law-makers give they sometimes take away."

"Labor at this time is doing a first class job of alienating its friends. It is hamstringing itself. It is defeating its own purpose. As to the AFL and CIO, Roosevelt said:

"After four bitter, uneconomically tragic years, they are right back where they started. That Mr. John L. Lewis, CIO czar, has not been able to arrive at some conclusion seems to indicate that he is not as competent as he is cracked up to be."

Referring to labor disorders and strikes, Roosevelt added: "Look at Detroit today. Perhaps 150,000 automobile workers are sitting in homes staring into space. This is Thanksgiving. What sort of Thanksgiving have they got?"

RECORD BROKEN IN PLACEMENT OF JOB HUNTERS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24—Public employment offices filled 308,400 jobs in October, breaking all previous records for the fifth time this year as industrial activity continued to expand, the social security board reported today.

The board said nearly half of the jobs were "of a continuing nature." It reported also that the number of persons looking for jobs through public employment offices dropped to the lowest level in 22 months.

During the first 10 months of this year, the board said, more than 2,192,000 jobs in private industry were filled, an increase of approximately 42 percent over the same period in 1938.

BULLETIN

BERLIN, Nov. 24—A German submarine torpedoed and heavily damaged the British cruiser Belfast in the Firth of Forth, the German high command claimed today.

The official German war communiqué stated that a report published in New York to the effect that the Belfast had been damaged heavily "has now been confirmed."

This "confirmation" was given as a "submarine report that it had torpedoed a cruiser of the Southampton class in the Firth of Forth."

Hitler Leads War

All humanitarian considerations aside, the palm of success thus far goes to Nazi Germany and her under-water mines. Presumably parachuted from airplanes, controlled by some ingenious new magnetic device and loaded with an explosive of incalculably destructive ability, they have been immensely successful in Germany's campaign to break the British blockade.

On the diplomatic front, Great Britain seems to have scored one victory and suffered one setback.

The victory was achieved in Rumania, where King Carol appointed pro-ally George Tatarsescu as his new premier in a stern rebuff to Adolf Hitler's attempts to gain an economic stranglehold on his Balkan kingdom.

Setback For Allies

The setback came in the low countries when Holland and Belgium protested to Britain against her contemplated seizure of German exports for the Nazis' allegedly "indiscriminate" mine-laying.

Gravity of this British dispute with her two friendly neighbors across the North Sea cannot yet be estimated. There may be serious repercussions far beyond the original anticipations of Britain's statesmen.

"ANGEL FROM HEAVEN" CALLED AGAINST KUHN

Mrs. Florence Camp To Be State Witness In Larceny Trial

HEARING NEARS CLOSE

State Case Against Bund Chief Appears None Too Strong

By Walter Kiernan
NEW YORK, Nov. 24 — Mrs. Florence Camp—the woman once termed "angel from heaven" by Fritz Kuhn—was expected to testify for the state today as the Bund leader's trial on forgery and larceny charges resumed after a one day Thanksgiving vacation.

Now nearing an end after almost three weeks of sometimes dreary, sometimes sparkling testimony, the case termed "ordinary" by District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey has, if nothing else, robbed Kuhn of his portly dignity and exposed him as a prolific writer of lurid letters.

However, as Judge James G. Wallace has several times remarked to the blue ribbon jury—Kuhn is on trial as an alleged larcenist, not as a great lover.

One of the principal charges against Kuhn appears at this stage of the case to be weak, another doubtful and a third the state's best bet. Although divided into 10 counts, the charges fall loosely into these groups:

1. Money taken from the legal defense fund of the Bund; $4,424.22.

2. Money spent on Mrs. Camp, $565.76.

3. Money intended as a fee for Attorney James D. C. Murphy and allegedly pocketed, $500.

The state has weakened its first charge by changing, several times, the figures on which the total was based. The $4,424.22 has been down as low as $600 at times and then come back to its original amount only to be knocked down again to $3,474.

On the second count there is considerable testimony that Mrs. Camp repaid the money Kuhn spent on her and that even if she didn't, the Bund owed him far more in his drawing account than he expended. This one looks doubtful.

The state's strongest case is on the Murray count. Murray is a well-regarded attorney. He looked and sounded good on the witness stand and he said he received nothing from Kuhn. Kuhn claims he gave the money to one of his staff to deliver to Murray and the messenger claims he gave it to an assistant of the attorney and got a receipt for it. The receipt is "missing" and the defense implication is that it has been missing since the district attorney's men removed the Bund's records.

Present indications are that the trial may run through Monday although there is a slight possibility that it may be ended tomorrow.

ROAD WORKERS READY TO MEET WINTER THREAT

Maintaining highway standards of safety during the winter months becomes a major problem in all counties. However, the highway department personnel throughout Pickaway County, and the rest of division six is so carefully set up and trained to meet sudden and treacherous changes in the weather that the task of keeping the roads open and comparatively safe for travel has been reduced to a minimum. There will be four snow plows used in this county for snow removal during the winter.

This array of equipment is not garaged at a central point in Pickaway County, but is scattered throughout the county at the several highway department sub-stations, so that it is available upon a minute's notice.

ROAD WORKERS READY TO MEET WINTER THREAT

Maintaining highway standards of safety during the winter months becomes a major problem in all counties. However, the highway department personnel throughout Pickaway County, and the rest of division six is so carefully set up and trained to meet sudden and treacherous changes in the weather that the task of keeping the roads open and comparatively safe for travel has been reduced to a minimum. There will be four snow plows used in this county for snow removal during the winter.

This array of equipment is not garaged at a central point in Pickaway County, but is scattered throughout the county at the several highway department sub-stations, so that it is available upon a minute's notice.

Mrs. Rose Hedges and her grandson, Don Hedges are both confined to their beds by sickness, gripp and pneumonia, but announced "slightly better" yesterday evening.

Marshal and Street Commissioner Bob Walden, off duty and abed for awhile, is out and going again but easy and gentle. Mrs. Hal Reid, severely burned at a gasoline stove oven at her home a couple of days ago, is getting along very well.

Turkey, chicken, or something with all the trimmings with the away members of the family at home, was the general order here yesterday. Practically all business was suspended. The Lutheran congregation held forenoon services. Rev. O. W. Smith of the U. B. Church is holding revival services at Robtown and no special service was held at the local church. The Methodist contribution for Thanksgiving was a donation to White Cross Hospital. The Church of Christ in Christian Union is holding revival services this week.

The secretary-treasurer of the local Farm Mutual Fire Association is busy this week mailing out assessment statements to some 3000 policy holders. The date of the regular annual meeting for election of three directors is Monday, December 4 and held at the office here.

Neither rabbits nor pheasant were to be found yesterday, a hunter told us who had just re-

Rumania against aggression from any quarter when she began to create the European bloc that Hitler finally came to look upon as "intolerable encirclement."

When Turkey signed with the allies, it became obvious that Rumania sooner or later would have to choose between Britain and Germany. By turning down an offer of "economic collaboration" from the Reich and placing Tarescu in the premier's chair, King Carol afforded positive proof that his interests lie with Britain and France.

Friendship Threatened

The attitude taken by Belgium and Holland toward the German export seizure announcement seems to indicate that any war based upon economic dislocation or destruction carries in its train the threat of alienating nations long friendly.

Certainly the tenor of Holland's protest to London is stern indeed. The Dutch maintain that the "moral" grounds cited by England in imposing the restriction as a retaliation will not hold water.

The only matter of importance, they declare, is that Holland will be made to suffer along with Germany. The Germans may be wrong in mining ship channels, the Dutch declare, but the British will be equally wrong in penalizing Holland in reprisal.

The immediate and superficial reaction of public opinion is that Holland and Belgium, after all these years of allied friendship, might be driven into the arms of Germany as a result.

There are even observers who believe that Germany launched an unrestricted mine warfare, knowing that the measures Britain would be obliged to take in return might place the Reich in the enviable position of granting Holland her own particular brand of "protection"—earning without a shot the right to use Dutch naval and aerial bases for her long-awaited "blitzkrieg" against England.

This belief to me seems to have little foundation in fact. It should not be forgotten that less than a fortnight ago, German press and officialdom were turning the full force of their criticism against Holland for her "abject failure" to react properly to the "injustices and inconveniences" resulting from the British blockade.

It was freely stated at the time that Germany was attempting to "bludgeon" Holland into a firmer stand, the inference being that if she failed to do so by herself, the Nazis would be only too glad to help her.

Now, at her first opportunity, Holland has taken a firm stand. The result of her protest upon England cannot be envisaged. But loss of her friendship for England seems out of the question.

BRITISH SHIP NOT MOVING, BUT SUNK BY MINE

LONDON, Nov. 24.—The 8,866-ton British freighter Mangalore was sent to the bottom today by a floating mine while riding at anchor at an unnamed east coast port, according to an official announcement.

The entire crew of 77 was rescued.

Detonation of the mine caused a tremendous explosion in the Mangalore's engine-room, throwing the members of the crew about like ten-pins.

Some were thrown into the water and twelve of them received injuries necessitating hospital treatment.

Sinking of the modern steel vessel while she rode at her moorings was cited as proof of Britain's contention that Nazi Germany is using magnetic or free mines which menace neutral and belligerent shipping in violation of international law.

Next Spring To Find U. S. Still At Peace, Declares Chief Executive

—of course I meant just what I said—and we have a war, but I managed somehow to get down here this fall and I hope that next spring there won't be any war.

"But if the war should still be going on, I still hope to be able to get down here, even if it is for a very much shortened holiday, even for a few days, just to see how the Warm Springs family is getting on."

News filters into Warm Springs slowly on occasion. It was reported briefly to the temporary White House yesterday that not only Kennedy and Davies, from London and Brussels, were being called home for consultation, but also Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, who once represented America in Poland—and "possibly William C. Bullitt," who is one of this nation's most alert diplomats at his Paris listening post.

Acting Press Secretary William D. Hassett turned over the following answer to accompanying newspaper men on the score of this inquiry:

"The president has not summoned home any of the four ambassadors named. Ambassador Kennedy sought and obtained leave to return home for Christmas with his wife and family, not to exceed two weeks. If the situation should require, he will be prepared to fly back to his post earlier. None of the other three ambassadors have been called home."

fused a German request that the Reich be permitted to send its armies through Hungary to attack Rumania.

"If Hitler should ignore military sanity and attack Rumania regardless, he also will run into a nest in the Balkans," said the observer.

"It is my conviction that Hungary as well as Rumania would fight now, and this perhaps would move the entire theatre of the European war into the Balkans, bringing in Turkey and giving the Anglo-French allies a passage through the Dardanelles to assist Rumania."

Meanwhile, in London considerable significance is attached to the recent delivery of 36 British bombing planes to Rumania to be attached to the Rumanian air force. It is understood that still more British planes will follow.

Europe fighting for? They are fighting to save their faces and avoid overthrow of the parties in power.

"There is no reason why a peace would be lasting should not be negotiated in Europe immediately.

"The situation amply demonstrates the wisdom of those members of congress who have been fighting every move by this government which might involve the United States in the European war. Europe can, and should, arrange peace on terms of equality for the 'haves' and the 'have nots.'"

Knutson, only remaining member of the house who voted against American entrance into the World war, predicted congressional forces who opposed lifting of the Arms Embargo on the ground that it might endanger American peace, will make a determined effort in the January congress to halt any move which might embroil the United States in European entanglements.

reports stated, but the British counter-plans were not revealed.

Additional ships which went down in the current wave of maritime destruction were the British freighter Darino, sunk by a submarine, which sank with a reported loss of 16 men, the British mine sweeper Argonite, sunk by a mine, the Greek freighter Elena R, sunk by a mine, and the British steamer Geraldus, formerly the famous Spanish blockade runner Candelston Castle, which struck a mine.

Also the British steamer Lowland, with an apparent loss of 10 lives, a British trawler and two French trawlers.

Meanwhile, it was reported this morning that the Italian steamer Fianona, which recently was badly damaged when it struck a mine, was beached along the English coast.

In addition to dropping mines into the Thames Estuary, it was stated, German planes also dropped them at other points along the English east coast.

The immediate and superficial reaction of public opinion is that Holland and Belgium, after all these years of allied friendship, might be driven into the arms of Germany as a result.

There are even observers who believe that Germany launched an unrestricted mine warfare, knowing that the measures Britain would be obliged to take in return might place the Reich in the enviable position of granting Holland her own particular brand of "protection"—earning without a shot the right to use Dutch naval and aerial bases for her long-awaited "blitzkrieg" against England.

This belief to me seems to have little foundation in fact. It should not be forgotten that less than a fortnight ago, German press and officialdom were turning the full force of their criticism against Holland for her "abject failure" to react properly to the "injustices and inconveniences" resulting from the British blockade.

It was freely stated at the time that Germany was attempting to "bludgeon" Holland into a firmer stand, the inference being that if she failed to do so by herself, the Nazis would be only too glad to help her.

Now, at her first opportunity, Holland has taken a firm stand. The result of her protest upon England cannot be envisaged. But loss of her friendship for England seems out of the question.

BRITISH SHIP NOT MOVING, BUT SUNK BY MINE

LONDON, Nov. 24.—The 8,866-ton British freighter Mangalore was sent to the bottom today by a floating mine while riding at anchor at an unnamed east coast port, according to an official announcement.

The entire crew of 77 was rescued. Detonation of the mine caused a tremendous explosion in the Mangalore's engine-room, throwing the members of the crew about like ten-pins.

Some were thrown into the water and twelve of them received injuries necessitating hospital treatment.

Sinking of the modern steel vessel while she rode at her moorings was cited as proof of Britain's contention that Nazi Germany is using magnetic or free mines which menace neutral and belligerent shipping in violation of international law.

Next Spring To Find U. S. Still At Peace, Declares Chief Executive

—of course I meant just what I said—and we have a war, but I managed somehow to get down here this fall and I hope that next spring there won't be any war.

"But if the war should still be going on, I still hope to be able to get down here, even if it is for a very much shortened holiday, even for a few days, just to see how the Warm Springs family is getting on."

News filters into Warm Springs slowly on occasion. It was reported briefly to the temporary White House yesterday that not only Kennedy and Davies, from London and Brussels, were being called home for consultation, but also Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, who once represented America in Poland—and "possibly William C. Bullitt," who is one of this nation's most alert diplomats at his Paris listening post.

Acting Press Secretary William D. Hassett turned over the following answer to accompanying newspaper men on the score of this inquiry:

"The president has not summoned home any of the four ambassadors named. Ambassador Kennedy sought and obtained leave to return home for Christmas with his wife and family, not to exceed two weeks. If the situation should require, he will be prepared to fly back to his post earlier. None of the other three ambassadors have been called home."

fused a German request that the Reich be permitted to send its armies through Hungary to attack Rumania.

"If Hitler should ignore military sanity and attack Rumania regardless, he also will run into a nest in the Balkans," said the observer.

"It is my conviction that Hungary as well as Rumania would fight now, and this perhaps would move the entire theatre of the European war into the Balkans, bringing in Turkey and giving the Anglo-French allies a passage through the Dardanelles to assist Rumania."

Meanwhile, in London considerable significance is attached to the recent delivery of 36 British bombing planes to Rumania to be attached to the Rumanian air force. It is understood that still more British planes will follow.

TO SHOPPERS

FRIENDS: Have you made a trip through Circleville stores in the last few days? Many have their Christmas decorations up and are displaying Yule merchandise for the wise, early shopper. Now is the time to select gifts from full stocks of merchandise. An outstanding Christmas program for shoppers is being planned by the civic, social and fraternal organizations. There will be a Santa Claus parade on Saturday, December 2, with a big reception for Old Saint Nick. Gifts will be given children following the procession. Santa will be in Circleville from 11 a. m. until 4:30 p. m. The parade will be held at 1 o'clock. Four bands will participate. There will be floats and costumed marchers. On Christmas Eve the American Legion will hold its annual party for youngsters. Plan to be in Circleville for the big celebration on December 2.

TO PEDESTRIANS, AUTOISTS

FRIENDS: During this season of the year streets and highways are often made treacherous by slippery surfaces due to rains and freezing. While it is impossible to control the weather it is possible to control the operation of motor vehicles—and safe driving is of immeasurable value in offsetting the weather hazards. Consequent on the inclement weather and poor visibility that mark this season, an increase in accidents can be expected unless drivers and pedestrians exercise more caution. Drive more carefully and take weather conditions into consideration. City officials had pedestrian lines painted on downtown streets so persons would cross at the proper places. There are many in Circleville who think those lines are nice, but never use them. Remember motorists do not exercise as much caution in the center of blocks as at intersections where they expect pedestrians to be crossing the street.

WORLD AT A GLANCE . . . . . Charles F. Stewart

UNCLE SAM having taken the lead in the development of closer Pan-American political, commercial and mutually defensive relationships, our Yankee educators now are intensifying a not altogether new movement toward a better cultural acquaintanceship among the 21 New World republics. A big gathering of them was held in Washington recently to formulate plans in this direction. It was very successful.

The Pan-American cultural get-together tendency dates back to early days following the war of 1914-18. President John F. O'Hara of Notre Dame university was a prominent figure at the late Washington conference. Father O'Hara, a wonderful man, is a pioneer in the campaign for New World cultural solidarity. I first met him in Argentina in about 1920, when he was below the Equator to arrange for an interchange of students between North and Latin American educational institutions. He was a bit ahead of his time then. Today the right juncture seems to have arrived.

State Secretary Hull reminded the conferees that our hemisphere may become the "trustee of the whole globe's civilization."

Latin American savants are sympathetic.

had in Buenos Aires with a resident Equadorian, one Achilles Lopez, and an Argentine, Jose Virasoro, a member of the great Argentine presidential house of Mitre.

Lopez's father had been his country's consul general in New York. Achilles was brought up there. He understood the United States as well as I did. Nevertheless, essentially he was Latin. Virasoro didn't know Yankee-land one single cent's worth. Lopez was explaining to him how odd we are.

"Suppose," he said, "that a Yankee political party were to nominate, for president, an individual who, it could be proved, had, besides his own wife, two or three supplementary families. It would ruin his chances of election."

"Why?" exclaimed Virasoro, shocked. "What's a man's private life to do with his qualifications for public office?"

"Of course," agreed Lopez, "it's ridiculous, but that's the Yankee complex."

Naturally, the Latins ought to make allowances for us, as well as we for them. Still, it's to be remembered that we're so big as to take on an air of some superiority. The Latins resent it.

IN BUSINESS MATTERS

The Latin American businessman is kinda funny.

Up here, if two businessmen make a bargain, they like to put it in writing, to obviate the risk of a future misunderstanding.

The Latin's verbal pledge is his word of honor. He'll strain a point to make it evident that he's keeping the spirit of his dicker. But if he signs a contract he reckons that he's entitled to out-swap the other chap—the latter have been put on notice to guard his own interest.

I've had a lot of experience at this.

I've had plenty of Latin Americans flim-flam me on written contracts. I never had one bounce me on an oral promise.

CRIMINAL PROCEDURE

Our Anglo-Saxon notion is that, if a man's pinched on a criminal charge, he's supposed to be guilty until he's been proved to be innocent.

That's true.

But the minute he says he's innocent, the burden is on his accuser to show that he's guilty. If the accuser shows again that he's guilty, it's assumed that he's guilty. Then, if he counters this evidence, once more it's taken for granted that he's innocent.

It isn't much different from our system.

If you're pinched for an alleged traffic law violation, the cop's charge against you is taken for granted unless you can prove the contrary.

You're guilty "per se."

Then, if you can, you can prove that you're innocent. And the cop can prove back again. And you can go on indefinitely.

It's the Latin system

What Layman Should Know of First Aid

By LOGAN CLENEDENING, M. D.

I AM ASKED by a reader to write an article or two on first aid. I am very glad to do this, although it is rather too large a subject for the one or two articles that I can devote to it.

Roughly, first aid can be divided, as all medical practice is divided, into, first, surgical and, second, medical and obstetrical emergencies.

Surgical emergencies consist, first, of the treatment of open wounds, and, second, accidents in which no break in the skin occurs.

The first aid treatment of a simple wound should be known to all laymen, and I think by this time is known to all laymen. It consists in covering the wound and making pressure with a sterile dressing. If no sterile dressing is available, a newly-laundered handkerchief, towel or napkin is sterile enough for all practical purposes.

Simple cuts and abrasions in the home should have an antiseptic such as tincture of iodine or mercurchrome dabbed on the open surface before the sterile dressing is applied.

Also in Automobile

Incidentally, we are always advised to put first aid equipment in the bathroom closet, but we seldom think of equipping the automobile with a first aid kit of sterile bandages, adhesive and antiseptics for such simple cases as I have mentioned.

The first aid treatment of hemorrhage is known to all Boy Scouts and they will tell you quite correctly that there are two kinds of hemorrhage, venous and arterial. The arterial hemorrhage spurts blood and requires a tourniquet or constriction above the point of hemorrhage. The venous hemorrhage is oozy and requires merely firm pressure with gauze bandage or towel.

In the absence of a tourniquet, the hand wrapped around an arm or pressure against an artery of the neck or thigh will act as a tourniquet until help comes.

Sounds Simple

This all sounds very simple, but in actual practice surgeons themselves cannot always tell the difference between venous and arterial hemorrhage. But if the diagnosis is puzzling, mere pressure, if firm enough, will control any kind of hemorrhage.

In accidents which do not involve open wounds, probably the best piece of advice that can be given the layman is to do as little as possible. He especially should not move the patient until professional aid can be procured. A great example of this was the famous English surgeon, Percival Pott, who suffered what has come to be known as "Pott's fracture" after being thrown from a horse on a wintry London street. He would not let anybody touch him for two hours, and until some porters with a shutter had arrived so that he could be conducted home properly.

I saw a harrowing result of meddlesome action on the part of bystanders this summer when a boy fell from a tree. Someone picked him up suddenly, allowing his head to hang down, a maneuver which fractured his backbone.

"TELL BILL GOODBYE"

By Marie Blizard

WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

SYNOPSIS

THE CHARACTERS:
FABIENNE SEYMOUR, rich, young and beautiful.
NICKY BARTLETT, wealthy and in love with Fabienne.
ELLEN CHAPMAN, young and capable mistress of Willoughby house.
YESTERDAY, Ellen tells Fabienne about "Bill."

CHAPTER SEVEN

FABIENNE had been a member of the staff of Willoughby house for nearly three months the November day the Children's clinic opened in the east wing. The three months had passed more swiftly than she had expected. In spite of herself she had become interested in the variety of taste to which she was assigned. She had progressed from reading classes to dramatic groups. She'd served a trick at recreation directing and she was now assigned to office work.

She had first found the office work tedious, but the staff was short and she had taken it on without complaint.

The afternoon of the opening of the clinic she found an interesting office duty; she was tabulating the monies subscribed for maintenance. Ideas were beginning to come to her whereby the sums might be increased when a crisp voice roused her from her reverie over her figures. The voice said:

"Hey, Miss! You!"

Fabienne Willoughby Seymour looked up, an expression of annoyance sharply etched on her patrician features.

Annoyance gave way to surprise and then a kind of appreciation as her eyes met the figure of a tall, broad-shouldered young man in a white coat.

"Were you speaking to me?"

"I was."

Fabienne's memory turned up a line she had read somewhere: "The proportions of the room seemed to diminish when he came into it." Proportions or no proportions, she decided that this young man needed flattering. She flashed a look at him that should have done it, and coolly resumed her figuring.

But she felt his eyes commanding her attention and she had to look at him.

"You can drop that," he said. "You're needed in the clinic." He turned on his heel and left.

"Miss Huxley is assigned to the clinic," she called after him. She began to arrange her cards neatly.

He came back to the door. "I said you were needed in the clinic," he repeated. "There is no one to receive the patients. Come at once, please."

A heated answer came to her tongue, but it would have been wasted, since he had already left. She put her papers in a desk drawer and went over to the clinic.

The receiving room was already filling with patients. Fabienne sat down at the desk and looked at a pile of papers which she saw were intended to be used as histories. Each was marked with questions and each was headed:

Orthopedic Clinic—Dr. J. W. Mallory.

She said, "Who is first, please?"

A woman with a child who wore a heavy brace on a wasted leg came first. Fabienne referred to her question sheet.

The doctor opened the door. "All right, Miss . . . Miss?" Fabienne grinned wickedly to herself without supplying her name. The doctor said, "I'm ready."

Fabienne directed the first patient in.

There were sixteen patients, and it was six when the last one was finished and Dr. Mallory opened the door to the reception room and came into it. Fabienne didn't look at him as she put the papers in the drawer and slammed it loudly. She swept the desk top clear of pencils.

"You working tonight?" the doctor asked.

"I beg your pardon?" she said.

"If you are, you'd better set the desk for Dr. Hopkins. He takes the evening clinic. And this place will have to be cleaned up." His eyes swept the untidy room. The wall chairs that had been arranged in an orderly row were now disarranged; the floor was littered with bits of papers. There was a pile of peanut shells in one corner, an apple core on the window sill.

"Certainly," she said sweetly. "If you'll excuse me while I change to overalls, I'll be right back with my pail and mop."

"Sorry, Princess," he said, and smiled. A nice, showy, disarming smile. "Cigaret?" he said, offering her a package.

Fabienne wanted one but she said, "No, thank you, Dr. Mallory," in a tone that was no more than formal.

"I guess I was a bit abrupt upstairs. You know how it is when we're in a hurry around here. There were a lot of poor youngsters waiting."

"One might still be polite," she said in a chilly voice.

"One might," he agreed. "Sometimes a busy doctor has to skip amenities. Next time I'll present my credentials, Miss Seymour."

So, he knew who she was after all.

She sat back in her chair and gave him a long, cool scrutinizing look that heretofore had reduced her men to bleating or babbling. Dr. Mallory, however, did neither. He sat on the corner of her desk with one leg thrown over it and enjoyed his cigarette. He was not, she saw at once, going to be reduced to anything.

"Did you take time out from your important patients to find out who I was?" she asked pointedly.

"No. I remembered suddenly, Young Tomassino, one of my patients, treasures a photograph of you. He showed it to me. I've been very curious about you."

"Really?" The way she said it was meant to indicate that she wasn't at all interested.

"Yes. I wondered what impelling motive brought you here."

"I'm afraid I'm going to disappoint you, Doctor. I am not contented with love for suffering humanity, disappointed in love or working for my livelihood. That rather leaves me without any interesting motive, doesn't it?"

"On the contrary, I expect the reason you don't want to talk about it would be very interesting. However, we'll skip it." He smiled again. "When one works ze lously and unselfishly as you have around here, it's usually because there's some kind of unselfish love back of it."

Fabienne looked at her wrist-watch. It was after six. For no reason that she was aware of, she thought of something that she had not remembered since she was a schoolgirl. She had always hated the hour of six. It had been her lonesome hour. Her mother had always been dressing then, her governesses having their dinners. She'd been lonesome for love then, for someone to love her. She hadn't thought of love as such in all these years and it was disturbing. Not at all like Fabienne Seymour. She said, "If you must have an answer, Doctor, it's love for myself."

"I can hardly believe that," he said, flipping his cigarette out the open window. "You ought to talk it over with a good psychologist."

Fabienne got up and pushed the desk chair into place.

"I didn't mean to presume," he said. In his tone there was conciliation that she could not reject.

She smiled for him then. "I didn't think you were. But you medical men are so knee-deep in problems you just naturally have to tack them onto normal people, don't you?"

He ducked, laughing.

"Next time I'll be better prepared for an answer. I'd hate to let you down."

"An answer?" he asked.

"About my motivations."

"I'll take you up on it," he said. "By the way, you might send the porter in here to clean up. Good night."

"Good night," she said.

She went up to her own office and looked out the window. He was getting into a small car as she watched. She thought: he might have asked me if he could drop me somewhere. Then she shrugged her shoulders. But she couldn't shrug away the memory of him.

TO SHOPPERS

FRIENDS: Have you made a trip through Circleville stores in the last few days? Many have their Christmas decorations up and are displaying Yule merchandise for the wise, early shopper. Now is the time to select gifts from full stocks of merchandise. An outstanding Christmas program for shoppers is being planned by the civic, social and fraternal organizations. There will be a Santa Claus parade on Saturday, December 2, with a big reception for Old Saint Nick. Gifts will be given children following the procession. Santa will be in Circleville from 11 a. m. until 4:30 p. m. The parade will be held at 1 o'clock. Four bands will participate. There will be floats and costumed marchers. On Christmas Eve the American Legion will hold its annual party for youngsters. Plan to be in Circleville for the big celebration on December 2.

CIRCUITEER.

TO PEDESTRIANS, AUTOISTS

FRIENDS: During this season of the year streets and highways are often made treacherous by slippery surfaces due to rains and freezing. While it is impossible to control the weather it is possible to control the operation of motor vehicles—and safe driving is of immeasurable value in offsetting the weather hazards. Consequent on the inclement weather and poor visibility that mark this season, an increase in accidents can be expected unless drivers and pedestrians exercise more caution. Drive more carefully and take weather conditions into consideration. City officials had pedestrian lines painted on downtown streets so persons would cross at the proper places. There are many in Circleville who think those lines are nice, but never use them. Remember motorists do not exercise as much caution in the center of blocks as at intersections where they expect pedestrians to be crossing the street.

CIRCUITEER.

TO CITY, COUNTY, TOWNSHIPS

OFFICIALS: The program for the purchase of a fire truck for use on rural fires seems to be an endurance contest. Ten townships have agreed to take part in the program. The city expects to participate and in addition purchase a second truck for city use. The commissioners have expressed their willingness to participate in the program. Despite all these promises and agreements the program is lagging. Decision on a program of this type should not be delayed. If there should be a serious fire in the city or county what would be done? Circleville has only one pumper and it cannot be used for rural runs. The old truck used for the country trips is out of commission. It seems the trustees, councilmen and commissioners should get together and thresh out the program as soon as possible.

CIRCUITEER.

TO LUTHER LEAGUERS

FRIENDS: Welcome to Circleville. Circleville folk and the Luther League of Trinity Lutheran Church are proud to be your host for the ninth annual convention of the Ohio District Luther League. An outstanding program has been arranged for your entertainment by the Circleville organization. You are certain to gain from the inspiration, education and fellowship of the sessions. I hope your visit to Circleville is most enjoyable and your district organization selects this city for another convention.

CIRCUITEER.

TO HEALTH OFFICIALS

GENTLEMEN: Some evening when there is a gentle breeze blowing I suggest you make a trip to the east end of the city and locate the source of that terrible stench. Residents of the district have been complaining about it for some time with no results. It may be ensilage. There is no excuse for such a condition existing in the limits of Circleville. It could be quickly corrected if the proper officials took action.

CIRCUITEER.

TO CIRCLEVILLE FOLK

RESIDENTS: Circleville folk should take more interest in decorating their homes for the Christmas season. There are some who have beautiful decorations every year. Others do nothing. If you were to visit some other cities during the Christmas season, comparable in size to Circleville, you would find practically every home along the main streets is decorated. These decorations need not be elaborate and expensive. Some of the most attractive are original ideas worked out at a slight cost. There is nothing that adds more to the joy and attractiveness of a city during the holiday season than decorated homes. Now is the time to plan your decoration.

CIRCUITEER.

TO SPORTSMEN

FELLOWS: Have any groups made an effort to assist the Columbus Beagle Club, one of the biggest organizations of its kind in the Midwest, in locating its clubhouse and trial grounds in Pickaway County? The club is seeking 1,000 acres of land for its clubhouse and trials. The club has two trials annually, one in the spring for a single day, and the other in the fall for a full week. The acreage desired must be pasture land but need not be in one tract. It may be in several tract just so they are adjoining. Pickaway County sportsmen would be wise if they assisted the club in locating suitable grounds in Pickaway County.

WORLD AT A GLANCE

—By— Charles P. Stewart

UNCLE SAM having taken the lead in the development of closer Pan-American political, commercial and mutually defensive relationships, our Yankee educators now are intensifying a not altogether new movement toward a better cultural acquaintanceship among the 21 New World republics. A big gathering of them was held in Washington recently to formulate plans in this direction. The Pan-American cultural get-together tendency dates back to early days following the war of 1914-18. President John F. O'Hara of Notre Dame university was a prominent figure at the late Washington conference. Father O'Hara, a wonderful man, is a pioneer in the campaign for New World cultural solidarity. I first met him in Argentina in about 1920, when he was below the Equator to arrange for an interchange of students between North and Latin American educational institutions. He was a bit ahead of his time then. Today the right juncture seems to have arrived.

had in Buenos Aires with a resident Ecuadorian, one Achilles Lopez, and an Argentine, Jose Virasoro, a member of the great Argentine presidential house of Mitre. Lopez's father had been his country's consul general in New York. Achilles was brought up there. He understood the United States as well as I did. Nevertheless, essentially he was Latin. Virasoro didn't know Yankee-land one single cent's worth. Lopez was explaining to him how odd we are. "Suppose," he said, "that a Yankee political party were to nominate, for president, an individual who, it could be proved, had, besides his own wife, two or three supplementary families. It would ruin his chances of election." "Why?" exclaimed Virasoro, shocked. "What's a man's private life to do with his qualifications for public office?" "Of course," agreed Lopez, "it's ridiculous, but that's the Yankee complex."

Naturally, the Latins ought to make allowances for us, as well as we for them. Still, it's to be remembered that we're so big as to take on an air of some superiority. The Latins resent it.

IN BUSINESS MATTERS The Latin American businessman is kinda funny. Up here, if two businessmen make a bargain, they like to put it in writing, to obviate the risk of a future misunderstanding. The Latin's verbal pledge is his word of honor. He'll strain a point to make it evident that he's keeping the spirit of his dicker. But if he signs a contract he reckons that he's entitled to out-swap the other chap—the latter have been put on notice to guard his own interest. I've had a lot of experience at this. I've had plenty of Latin American film-flam me on written contracts. I never had one bounce me on an oral promise.

CRIMINAL PROCEDURE Our Anglo-Saxon notion is that, if a man's pinched on a criminal charge, he's supposed to be guilty until he's been proved to be innocent. That's true. But the minute he says he's innocent, the burden is on his accuser to show that he's guilty. If the accuser shows again that he's guilty, it's assumed that he's guilty. Then, if he counters this evidence, once more it's taken for granted that he's innocent. It isn't much different from our system. If you're pinched for an alleged traffic law violation, the cop's charge against you is taken for granted unless you can prove the contrary. You're guilty "per se."

Then, if you can, you can prove that you're innocent. And the cop can prove back again. And you can go on indefinitely. It's the Latin system.

What Layman Should Know of First Aid

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

I AM ASKED by a reader to write an article or two on first aid. I am very glad to do this, although it is rather too large a subject for the one or two articles that I can devote to it.

Roughly, first aid can be divided, as all medical practice is divided, into, first, surgical and, second, medical and obstetrical emergencies.

Surgical emergencies consist, first, of the treatment of open wounds, and, second, accidents in which no break in the skin occurs.

The first aid treatment of a simple wound should be known to all laymen, and I think by this time is known to all laymen. It consists in covering the wound and making pressure with a sterile dressing. If no sterile dressing is available, a newly-laundered handkerchief, towel or napkin is sterile enough for all practical purposes.

Simple cuts and abrasions in the home should have an antiseptic such as tincture of iodine or mercurchrome dabbed on the open surface before the sterile dressing is applied.

Also in Automobile Incidentally, we are always advised to put first aid equipment in the bathroom closet, but we seldom think of equipping the automobile with a first aid kit of sterile bandages, adhesive and antiseptics for such simple cases as I have mentioned.

The first aid treatment of hemorrhage is known to all Boy Scouts and they will tell you quite correctly that there are two kinds of hemorrhage, venous and arterial. The arterial hemorrhage spurts blood and requires a tourniquet or constriction above the point of hemorrhage. The venous hemorrhage is oozy and requires merely firm pressure with gauze bandage or towel. In the absence of a tourniquet, the hand wrapped around an arm or pressure against an artery of the neck or thigh will act as a tourniquet until help comes.

Sounds Simple

This all sounds very simple, but in actual practice surgeons themselves cannot always tell the difference between venous and arterial hemorrhage. But if the diagnosis is puzzling, mere pressure, if firm enough, will control any kind of hemorrhage.

In accidents which do not involve open wounds, probably the best piece of advice that can be given the layman is to do as little as possible. He especially should not move the patient until professional aid can be procured. A great example of this was the famous English surgeon, Percival Pott, who suffered what has come to be known as "Pott's fracture" after being thrown from a horse on a wintry London street. He would not let anybody touch him for two hours, not until some porters with a shutter had arrived so that he could be conducted home properly.

I saw a harrowing result of mediocre action on the part of bystanders this summer when a boy fell from a tree. Someone picked him up suddenly, allowing his head to hang down, a maneuver which fractured his backbone.

Answer—Grapefruit can be used the same as oranges in the same quantity.

"TELL BILL GOODBYE"

By Marie Blizard

THE CHARACTERS: FABIENNE SEYMOUR, rich, young and beautiful. NICKY BARTLETT, wealthy and in love with Fabienne. ELLEN CHAPMAN, young and capable mistress of Willoughby house. YESTERDAY, Ellen tells Fabienne about 'Bill'.

CHAPTER SEVEN

FABIENNE had been a member of the staff of Willoughby house for nearly three months the November day the Children's clinic opened in the east wing. The three months had passed more swiftly than she had expected. In spite of herself she had become interested in the variety of taste to which she was assigned. She had progressed from reading classes to dramatic groups. She'd served a trick at reaction directing and she was now assigned to office work.

She had first found the office work tedious, but the staff was short and she had taken it on without complaint.

The afternoon of the opening of the clinic she found an interesting office duty; she was tabulating the monies subscribed for maintenance. Ideas were beginning to come to her whereby the sums might be increased when a crisp voice roused her from her reverie over her figures. The voice said:

"Hey, Miss! You!"

Fabienne Willoughby Seymour looked up, an expression of annoyance sharply etched on her patrician features.

Amusement gave way to surprise and then a kind of appreciation as her eyes met the figure of a tall, broad-shouldered young man in a white coat.

"Were you speaking to me?"

"I was."

Fabienne's memory turned up a line she had read somewhere: "The proportions of the room seemed to diminish when he came into it. Proportions or no proportions, she decided that this young man needed flattery. She flashed a look at him that should have done it, and coolly resumed her figuring."

But she felt his eyes commanding her attention and she had to look at him.

"You can drop that," he said. "You're needed in the clinic." He turned on his heel and left.

"Miss Huxley is assigned to the clinic," she called after him. She began to arrange her cards neatly.

He came back to the door. "I said you were needed in the clinic," he repeated. "There is no one to receive the patients. Come at once, please."

A heated answer came to her tongue, but it would have been wasted, since he had already left. She put her papers in a desk drawer and went over to the clinic.

The receiving room was already filling with patients. Fabienne sat down at the desk and looked at a pile of papers which she saw were intended to be used as histories. Each was marked with questions and each was headed:

Orthopedic Clinic—Dr. J. W. Mallory.

She said, "Who is first, please?" A woman with a child who wore a heavy brace on a wasted leg came first. Fabienne referred to her question sheet.

The doctor opened the door. "All right, Miss . . . Miss?" Fabienne grinned wickedly to herself without supplying her name. The doctor said, "I'm ready."

Fabienne directed the first patient in.

There were sixteen patients, and it was six when the last one was finished and Dr. Mallory opened the door to the reception room and came into it. Fabienne didn't look at him as she put the papers in the drawer and slammed it loudly. She swept the desk top clear of pencils.

The voice said: "Hey! Miss! You!"

"You working tonight?" the doctor asked.

"I beg your pardon?" she said. "If you are, you'd better set the desk for Dr. Hopkins. He takes the evening clinic. And this place will have to be cleaned up." His eyes swept the untidy room. The wall chairs that had been arranged in an orderly row were now disarranged; the floor was littered with bits of papers. There was a pile of peanut shells in one corner, an apple core on the window sill.

"Certainly," she said sweetly. "If you'll excuse me while I change to overalls, I'll be right back with my pail and mop."

"Sorry, Princess," he said, and smiled. A nice, showy, disarming smile. "Cigaret?" he said, offering her a package.

Fabienne wanted one but she said, "No, thank you, Dr. Mallory." In a tone that was no more than formal.

"I guess I was a bit abrupt upstairs. You know how it is when we're in a hurry around here. There were a lot of poor youngsters waiting."

"One might still be polite," she said in a chilly voice.

"One might," he agreed. "Sometimes a busy doctor has to skip amenities. Next time, I'll present my credentials, Miss Seymour."

So, he knew who she was after all.

She sat back in her chair and gave him a long, cool scrutinizing look that heretofore had reduced her men to bleating or babbling. Dr. Mallory, however, did neither. He sat on the corner of her desk with one long leg thrown over it and enjoyed his cigarette. He was not, she saw at once, going to be reduced to anything.

"Did you take time out from your important patients to find out who I was?" she asked pointedly.

"No," I remembered suddenly. Young Tomassino, one of my patients, treasures a photograph of you. He showed it to me. I've been very curious about you."

"Really?" The way she said it was meant to indicate that she wasn't at all interested.

"Yes, I wondered what impelling motive brought you here."

"I'm afraid I'm going to disappoint you, Doctor. I am not consumed with love for suffering humanity, disappointed in love or working for my livelihood. That rather leaves me without any interesting motive, doesn't it?"

"On the contrary, I expect the reason you don't want to talk about it would be very interesting. However, we'll skip it." He smiled again. "When one works ze lously and unselfishly as you have around here, it's usually because there's some kind of unselfish love back of it."

Fabienne looked at her wrist-watch. It was after six. For no reason that she was aware of, she thought of something that she had not remembered since she was a schoolgirl. She had always hated the hour of six. It had been her lonesome hour. Her mother had always been dressing then, her governesses having their dinners. She'd been lonesome for love then, for someone to love her. She hadn't thought of love as such in all these years and it was disturbing. Not at all like Fabienne Seymour. She said, "If you must have an answer, Doctor, it's love for myself."

"I can hardly believe that," he said, flipping his cigarette out the open window. "You ought to talk it over with a good psychologist."

Fabienne got up and pushed the desk chair into place.

"I didn't mean to presume," he said. In his tone there was conciliation that she could not reject.

She smiled for him then. "I didn't think you were. But you medical men are so knee-deep in problems you just naturally have to tack them onto normal people, don't you?"

He ducked, laughing.

"Next time I'll be better prepared for an answer. I'd hate to let you down."

"An answer?" he asked.

"About my motivations."

"I'll take you up on it," he said. "By the way, you might send the porter in here to clean up. Good night."

"Good night," she said.

She went up to her own office and looked out the window. He was getting into a small car as she watched. She thought: he might have asked me if he could drop me somewhere. Then she shrugged her shoulders. But she couldn't shrug away the memory of him.

OVERHEAD LUXURY

THE NEXT best thing to a mink coat is a mink hat—and if you can't have mink, there's beaver and other less luxurious furs to fit on your head. Here are two models on the cuff, a popular style in millinery whether it's the pelt or fabric variety. It's obvious that the off-the-face hat requires pleasing features and well-groomed hair; otherwise, it's easy to wear and, better, ever so comfortable. Being fur, these hats are dressy enough to give you a lift on important dates, even if your coat and dress are severely plain, but either model will take a jeweled clip or a pink rose, should you wish to add a bit of color. And don't forget that, come another winter, you'll take your fur hat out of storage and have it remodeled. The American designer of today's hats finishes the mink, top, with black felt drapery, and the sheared beaver with a long pheasant feather and brown suede back.

OVERHEAD LUXURY

THE NEXT best thing to a mink coat is a mink hat—and if you can't have mink, there's beaver and other less luxurious furs to fit on your head. Here are two models on the cuff, a popular style in millinery whether it's the pelt or fabric variety. It's obvious that the off-the-face hat requires pleasing features and well-groomed hair; otherwise, it's easy to wear and, better, ever so comfortable. Being fur, these hats are dressy enough to give you a lift on important dates, even if your coat and dress are severely plain, but either model will take a jeweled clip or a pink rose, should

you wish to add a bit of color. And don't forget that, come another winter, you'll take your fur hat out of storage and have it remodeled. The American designer of today's hats finishes the mink, top, with black felt drapery, and the sheared beaver with a long pheasant feather and brown suede back.

Mrs. Adah Wilson of Circleville and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Stoffer and son of Lancaster.

Wedding Anniversary Observed

and Mrs. Edwin Marshall and son, Robert, Mrs. Mary Nye of Mason, O.; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Cupp and sons, Marshall, Blenn, Carl and Nelson of Wayne Township; Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Marshall, Harold, Marvin and Paul Marshall and the host and hostess of the home.

BUCKEYE SQUAD ENTRAINS FOR GRID CLASSIC

Semi-Confident Group Of Warriors Prepared For Hard Battle

TOM HARMON IS PROBLEM

State, However, Hopes To Halt Activity Of One Of Game's Best Backs

COLUMBUS, Nov. 24 — Determined to emblazon their names along side of other Ohio football immortals, Ohio State University's pigskin squad today entrained for Ann Arbor where tomorrow they will clash with Michigan, an ancient and respected foe.

If Ohio's men trample the Wolverines tomorrow, they will serve a double purpose. Not alone will they gain undisputed possession of the Big Ten title but they will also atone for last year's crushing defeat inflicted in Ohio stadium.

It was a semi-confident group of warriors that embarked for the land of spreading pines and sky blue water. Their mission, they realized, was chiefly to stop the far famed Tom Harmon, a bruising halfback who, with one exception, has roamed playfully through opposition lines and secondaries.

Harmon Is Problem

Harmon was the pressing problem dancing maliciously to and from in the extremely agile brain of Coach Francis Schmidt. Schmidt, of course, had no intention of revealing for publication any defense he might have worked out for Harmon's benefit. But you can bet that Terrible Tom will crack into a stone wall on several occasions in the colorful Wolverine stadium.

And that stadium will be colorful tomorrow. A crowd of at least 75,000 is anticipated. About 15,000 will be Ohioans who will make the trip on 16 special trains leaving from Columbus, Cleveland, Akron and Youngstown. Many more will go by automobile, bus and plane for this combat which may truly be written down as one of the season's memorable struggles.

It was the largest delegation to accompany an Ohio team in several years. So, singing "Heigh Ho" and "We don't give a dam" for the whole state of Michigan," the cheerful fans were soon to be on their merry way.

Rooters Confident

Not even the absence from the lineup of Fullback Jimmy Langhurst nor the possibility that Halfback Frank Zadworney might be on the sidelines dampened the ardor of the admirers who have waited 20 years to celebrate Ohio's winning the conference title.

Not by any stretch of the most fertile imagination could Langhurst be in the lineup. His left leg was in bad shape and on the bench he will stay. Zadworney has been bothered by an ailing leg, but his case is more hopeful than is Langhurst's.

Pinch hitting for Langhurst will probably be the up and coming sophomore from Mansfield, John Hallabrin who bumped Illinois all over the field last Saturday. Tentatively, Schmidt has considered inserting Johnny Rabb, a senior, into the fullback spot as a starter. But the opinion seemed to be that Rabb's day is done and to Hallabrin will go the chance for glory.

A prime example, this is, of the fleeting pace of football fame. For not so long ago, the headlines used to splash Rabb's name into the face of every Sunday morning consumer of the sports page.

Evenly Matched

Offensively, the two teams appeared to be evenly matched. But feature a slashing running game spiced with effective passing. Harmon being Michigan's slinger and Quarterback Don Scott tossing the pigskin for Ohio.

Defensively, Ohio was stronger. The Buck line, with the exception of the one lapse against Cornell and momentary weakness against Minnesota, has been well nigh impregnable. Michigan's forward wall, more than once this season, has had more holes than a fish net.

So, now again as in other scattered years, Ohio knocks for admission to the hall of fame. And those two brief hours on the green turf tomorrow afternoon will bring jubilation of abject despair to a band of youngsters who have brought to Ohio State a new kind of spirit. The kind of spirit that makes great men.

$44,600 WILL BE PAID TO CHRISTMAS CLUB MEMBERS

SUM SURPASSES FIGURES FOR LAST TWO YEARS

Large Part Of Big Sum Will Flow Through Business Channels Of City

CITY BANKS TOTAL $37,500

Ashville And Williamsport Institutions Help Swell Holiday Funds

Christmas shopping is due for a tremendous boost about December 1 when approximately $44,600 will be paid to about 1,050 Circleville and Pickaway County folk in Christmas club savings.

The sum surpasses figures for the last two years. In 1938 there was about $34,850 paid to 1,020 persons and in 1937 about $38,200 paid to 1,189.

The three Circleville banks having Christmas savings will pay out about $37,500. Last year they paid about $29,000 and in 1937 about $31,000.

Reports obtained from the banks Friday showed the Circleville Savings and Banking Company will pay about 550 persons a total of $24,000; the Third National Bank will pay $10,000 to about 200 persons, and the Second National Bank $3,500 to 100 persons.

About 150 persons have savings accounts in Ashville banks. The Citizens bank reported 90 Christmas savings accounts amounting to about $4,000. The Ashville Banking Company reported 60 accounts amounting to about $2,000.

The Farmers National Bank of Williamsport will pay about $1,000 to 40 depositors. The Scioto Bank of Commercial Point reported Christmas savings of about $100 for four customers.

A large part of the Christmas savings will flow through business channels during the Christmas shopping season.

The new clubs start early in December.

'GRINGOS'

KANSAS CITY, Mo.,—Why Mexicans call Americans "gringos" was explained recently by Capt. John B. Reybold, commander of the Second Dragoons of the Second Cavalry. "When the Second Cavalry fought in the Mexican War of 1846," he related, "the men rode into Mexico singing an old Irish drinking song, 'Green Grow the Rushes.' The Mexicans heard that song so frequently that they called the cavalrymen "gringos" which was the way the opening words sounded to them."

FLOWER SHOW DRAWS CROWDS TO GREENHOUSE

Wednesday concluded the annual Flower Show at the local greenhouses and the attendance was excellent in spite of the rainy and threatening weather all three days of the show.

The crowd late Wednesday afternoon was so great many persons could not register. Brethren, were more than pleased with the response of the public to their effort to show Chrysanthemums at the peak of their production. Monday and Tuesday each person registering was presented with a cactus plant in a small pot on Wednesday, every fifth person registering was presented with a large chrysanthemum.

Among the varieties of Chrysanthemums most admired was a large red-bronze one named Mrs. David F. Roy, and another enormous one named Kelley. In the smaller daisy and anemone types, Stoplight with red petals and a yellow crowned center, The Titan an all red anemone, and Frieda with orchid petals and a crested yellow center were commented on most often.

Approximately 30 varieties were in bloom at the time of the show, not including the un-named Japanese seedlings, all of which were thread and quilled types. During the chrysanthemum season the greenhouse grows more than 275 different varieties, the first ones blooming in early September through the use of black shading cloth, and the latest blooms being Garza and Mistletoe varieties which are out just before Christmas.

Bermuda consists of a group of 360 islands.

FLOWER SHOW DRAWS CROWDS TO GREENHOUSE

Wednesday concluded the annual Flower Show at the local greenhouses and the attendance was excellent in spite of the rainy and threatening weather all three days of the show.

The crowd late Wednesday afternoon was so great many persons could not register. Brehmers, were more than pleased with the response of the public to their effort to show Chrysanthemums at the peak of their production. Monday and Tuesday each person registering was presented with a cactus plant in a small pot on Wednesday, every fifth person registering was presented with a large chrysanthemum.

Among the varieties of Chrysanthemums most admired was a large red-bronze one named Mrs. David F. Roy, and another enormous one named Kelley. In the smaller daisy and anemone types, Stoplight with red petals and a yellow crowned center, The Titan an all red anemone, and Frieda with orchid petals and a crested yellow center were commented on most often.

Approximately 30 varieties were in bloom at the time of the show, not including the un-named Japanese seedlings, all of which were thread and quilled types. During the chrysanthemum season the greenhouse grows more than 275 different varieties, the first ones blooming in early September through the use of black shading cloth, and the latest blooms being Garza and Mistletoe varieties which are out just before Christmas.

Bermuda consists of a group of 360 islands.
